

Thank you for your commitment to your child's musical journey! Learning to play an instrument or sing is a worthwhile and rewarding endeavor. Some students desire to study music to develop their abilities as solo performers, while others want to become better ensemble musicians. Whatever the motivation of the student, our goal is to nurture their love of music and performance and build confidence in their abilities. Being a musician involves the development of a number of skills: technique, interpretation, sight-reading, aural and acting skills, theory and performance etiquette. The honing of these abilities requires a good deal of discipline and hard work. Students who practice regularly show the most improvement. Students also committed to their consistent weekly lesson schedule will experience greater pride in their progress! It is evident that your decision to support your child's pursuit of their musical study plays a significant role in their level of commitment to their journey. Regardless of where and when your child practices, it is important to reinforce the techniques and skills taught in lessons every day. One lesson a week will not improve abilities. Only practice and self-discipline can do that. Encourage your child and be their biggest fan!

Presents

JANUARY

JAM

Friday, January 22, 2010